

SUFFRAGETTES WORK HARD FOR SIGNATURES

Preparing Long Petition to Congress for Votes for Women.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—As a means of shortening the time necessary for getting signatures for the petition, women suffragists are preparing to send to Congress asking to be enfranchised, it has been decided that suffragists shall attend all meetings in New York within the next few weeks and present the petition to those in the audience for signatures.

Women in the various suffrage associations will be appointed to carry that the work along the various lines. Those who are connected with churches will take church petitions to the various meetings other than Sunday religious services. In a similar way the home women—those who do not belong to clubs or are not allied to public movements—will be reached. Other women will carry the petitions to labor organizations, both men's and women's; to philanthropic society meetings and to club meetings.

If twenty women are busy circulating the petition in the audience during the half hour in which it is gathering it is thought many signatures may be collected.

It has been found that there are still men and women in New York who do not know what woman suffrage is. The petitions are said to be doing wonders in the way of education along this line, as there are already many in the hands of persons who, in their efforts to get signatures, are bound to explain the suffrage cause.

Mrs. Rose F. Stokes is among those who asked for petitions. She wanted thirty, which, if filled out, will mean 30 signatures. The Central Labor Union of Brooklyn also sent for petitions. Mrs. Lillian Weiss will carry the petition to the trades unions with the assistance of Miss Florence Rau and Miss Rose Schneider.

Mrs. M. E. Welch will look out for Christian Science signatures, as she attends that church.

Col. George Harvey has accepted an invitation to attend the suffragists' luncheon to be given in the Hotel Astor on January 15, and will be the first man to sit at table at a gathering of would-be woman voters.

THEATRICAL PLANS.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 10.—Philadelphia is to enjoy all the benefits of a national theater as soon as the new theater in New York is dedicated. It has been arranged that twelve performances of the new theater's first season's repertoire be given at the Lyric, on Broad street.

SENATOR JEFF DAVIS FEARS BLOODINESS

Sick in St. Louis, and Is Threatened With Blood Poisoning.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 10.—Senator Jeff Davis of Arkansas, who is ill at Hotel Jefferson, here, today said that he was rapidly improving and had only been threatened with an attack of pneumonia, but that he is a persistent rumor that blood poisoning is feared as a result of a vaccination.

Yesterday Senator Davis told the Federal jury before whom he was appearing in a damage suit that he was not feeling well enough to make an argument. He, however, managed to hold the floor for thirty minutes. He was taken to his hotel in a cab and was not able to appear in court when a verdict in his favor was announced.

JAPANESE PAPER DISSECTS TREATY

Skeptical of Our Sincerity in Dealing With Hostile Law in California.

YOKOHAMA, Jan. 10.—The Mainichi Shimbun, a Japanese newspaper commenting on the California anti-Japanese land bill, says the purpose of the anti-Japanese party in California is not only to prohibit the immigration of Japanese laborers, but to annihilate the rights of residence, trade, and all other activities possessed by the Japanese living in America. It continues:

"Although it is too early to predict the sort of law that will be passed by California, at the time of the negotiations over the commercial treaty, managed by the United States, it is not difficult to see that the California Legislature is determined to decide what measures to take."

DRAG NET IS OUT FOR PURSE THIEF

Two Negroes Under Arrest on Suspicion of Being Assailant of Miss Dill.

Detectives from the central office are today looking for a negro who attacked and robbed Miss Flora B. Dill, of 1737 New Jersey avenue northwest, of a pocketbook containing about $2 in money and several other articles.

Miss Dill was returning from the C Street Market and was nearly in front of her home when the negro ran up behind her and grabbed her purse from her hand. Miss Dill says she got a look at the negro and that she can identify him if he is captured. Police all over the city have been furnished with a description.

Eighth precinct officers have arrested two negroes on suspicion.

REVEAL A KEYNOTE OF TARIFF REVISION

Present Status of Treasury Balance May Go a Long Way Toward Giving a Halt to Intended Radical Pruning.

By J. C. WELLIVER.

The pressing necessities of the Government revenue situation are having the manifest effect of staggering hope for scientific, systematic, logical revision of the tariff.

If the immense surplus of two years ago had continued piling up, there is small doubt revision at this time would have been the real thing. The country was in the frame of mind for it, and the tariff was looked upon, not as the obvious instrument for raising revenues, but as the natural channel through which to sluice off the upper layer of surplus.

At the height of abounding prosperity the country had come to the impression of business security and confidence which made the tariff look insignificant as the means to maintaining that prosperity. Today there is not nearly so much assurance of the destined commercial supremacy of the United States as there used to be. There is clamor for foreign markets that an outlet may be had for American goods; but there is vasty more concern about preserving the home market than there was when factories were running overtime and unable to keep up with orders, and when freight congestion was the complaint in every terminal in the land.

Too Much Pruning.

Thus there has been a measure of revision against too much tariff pruning. But the real determining influence with Congress is the state of the revenues. The more conservative attitude of the public mind is largely offset by the fact that so many leaders of big industry have come forward and sided with the revisionists.

When Andrew Carnegie, king of steel, declares for free steel; when John W. Gates, whose brain projected the United States Steel Corporation, declares for free steel, coal, and lumber; when Isaac Stephenson, one of the wealthiest and most experienced of the lumber multimillionaires, declares flatly for free lumber, pulp, and pulp wood; when the New England shoe manufacturers are willing to give up their protection on shoes if only they may have free hides; and when the great live stock interests of the West show less concern about the tariff cut than ever before—when all these evidences of the more liberal attitude of protected industry are brought out in the tariff hearings, it is small wonder that the ultra-protectionists are moved to misgiving their strength.

So it may be said that developments justify the expectation that the Payne tariff measure will be a good deal of an emergency act. It will come far from reflecting the present-day, normal average judgment of the country about tariff. It will be an attempt at combination of protection and revenue ideas, and the belief grows strong that it will be one of the shortest-lived tariffs of recent times.

All this uncertainty about the tariff future brings emphasis to the demand for removal of tariff from the domain of politics. The tariff commission idea is stronger in Congress, by far, than it was last spring. When the Beveridge tariff commission proposal was laid before the Senate it seemed to have small chance of becoming a serious possibility in constructive legislation for many years. The protectionists would not hear of it. They were not sufficiently concerned about it to take it seriously.

Different Today.

Today it is different. The idea of a commission, with general powers of adjusting the schedule to the conditions which everybody knows will rapidly and sharply change as business conditions improve is taken most cheerfully by a fast increasing number of people. They foresee that a tariff measure passed now must be more or less time-serving. It will be antiquated after a year of good times.

In Congress, then, to go back to the tariff, and concentrate its energies for another special session, or for a long session, on making a new set of schedules to meet changed conditions? There is protest against the idea, among business men and public men alike; and especially among the members of Congress who consider themselves progressive, and want more time of Congress to legislate on other questions in which they are interested.

Out of all this mixture of interests and attitudes, it is becoming clear that there will develop, at some time during the tariff cut, a new tariff bill. The matter is not formulated into a definite proposal yet, but caucuses, conferences, discussions, and efforts at agreement on some specific plan are certain to be the order of the day before the tariff measure is finally passed.

PORT AU PRINCE, Jan. 10.—Gamerindo Rivis has arrived on the steamer ship Quebec from St. Thomas. He is going to Santiago de Cuba. He says General Castro will be back in Venezuela as President before six months, and that he has arms and ammunition ready to be shipped to co-operate in the movement.

PAROLE LAW GOES, NEWBERRY FAVORS
SAYS PRISON HEAD PORTSMOUTH YARD

Major McClaughry Defends Secretary Plans to Enlarge System, While Judges New Hampshire Station, Is Report.

CHICAGO, Jan. 10.—Major R. W. McClaughry, head of the Federal prison at Fort Leavenworth, and one of the foremost criminologists in the United States, has come to the front in defense of the parole system.

"A man is sent to prison for reformatory purposes," says Major McClaughry. "He should be treated as the sick and the insane. Each case should be dealt with separately, and when the man is released he should be cared for and given employment. This is what the parole law is for and what it is doing."

Opposed to Major McClaughry's views, as they were given, is a quiet of the Commercial Club, which is considered an ideal place for dry docks, and which can be constructed in solid rock. Portsmouth navy reservation is also picked as the proper place for the great number of marines who will shortly be removed from the ships of the navy.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Jan. 10.—If the plans of Secretary of the Navy Newberry, are carried out the Portsmouth, N. H., navy yard, according to information received here today, promises to be the best and biggest naval station of the Government in the country.

Already plans are to be presented to Congress for the construction of two more large dry docks that will take the largest battleship.

The hundred of acres of available land at the Portsmouth harbor known as the Portsmouth Island, where the 1,700 Spanish prisoners of Covarr's fleet were quarantined after the battle of Santiago, was considered an ideal place for dry docks, and which can be constructed in solid rock.

Portsmouth navy reservation is also picked as the proper place for the great number of marines who will shortly be removed from the ships of the navy.
